Cotton as a Factor

in America's New World Position

That was a timely and thoughtful speech Senator J. W. Fulbright made at the 12th annual National Cotton Picking contest at Blytheville yesterday.

He not only talked about cotton—he showed cotton's connection with foreign trade problems, and explained how vital our foreign trade policy is in America's new role as the No. 1 world power. We are in the seat today that Great Britain occupied but a few years ago—and Fulbright's speech should help every American understand our heavy responsibilities and our new dangers.

The senator was optimistic on the future course of cotton prices. He said there is no real surplus of the staple, and pointed out that in the 18 years since 1933 the Commodity Credit Corporation has shown a profit of 288 million dollars—compared to a loss of 14 million dollars by the same agency in handling the potato crop.

"Cotton," Fulbright continued, "is one of the main reasons I became interested in foreign trade. An average of 400,000 bales are exported each year and the problems of the cotton industry are not merely the problems of the South and the nation—they are international problems."

And at this point Fulbright touched on a profound truth that some American still fail to grasp—we are World Power No. 1, and can't abdicate. We can't shake loose from either decisions or their consequences; and we have to give constant thought to the matter to avert disaster.

Said the senator: "Instead of being remote, our mistakes in foreign policy have touched every pocketbook in America, have taken thousands of our finest young men and have disrupted the lives of millions of our people."

New Scandals Are Hinted in Shake-Down Investigations in Internal Revenue Bureau

Washington, Oct. 6 (AP)—House investigators hinted today at new revelations of scandals within the internal revenue bureau in the wake of mounting allegations of tax shake-downs and sideline profits by key tax collection officials. But the probers would not say what was to come when they get back to work Tuesday.

As unfolded thus far by a house ways and means subcommittee, it was a story studied by grand jury indictments, dismissals and resignations retiring district tax collectors in such scattered spots as New York, Boston, St. Louis and San Francisco. However, a chairman, King (D-Calif.), indicated investigation has halted the alleged irregularities.

When the subcommittee recessed last night, King stated: "I think that during this week's hearings we have seen enough to indicate that we are dealing with a scheme that was intended to embrace more than just a single collector's office, and that had begun to spread across the nation when it was frustrated."

Meanwhile, Internal Revenue Commissioner John B. Dunlap announced the resignation of Carroll E. Mealey as deputy commissioner in charge of the alcohol tax unit, for reasons of ill health.

Mealey's letter of resignation, in the deputy's handwriting, was made effective at the close of business yesterday. It was dated the previous day, Oct. 4, from Mealey's home at Albany, N. Y.

Mealey informed Dunlap he had suffered a recurrence of a heart condition, and that on doctor's orders he was forced to take at least a 30-day rest.

Dunlap accepted the resignation "with regrets."

In a letter to Chairman King Dunlap termed Mealey "an outstanding public servant." He said he was making the announcement through the committee to insure that the "unfortunate publicity" centering on the internal revenue service would not reflect on Mealey's resignation.

Negro Wins Cotton-Picker Title for '51

Blytheville, Oct. 6 (UP)—Persistence has paid off for a 32-year-old Clarksville, Miss., Negro who won the national cotton picking contest here yesterday after failing to make the grade in five previous attempts.

Johnnie Johnson is the second Negro ever to collect the $1,000 first money in the contest. The other was Elijah Gordon of Harrisburg in 1942.

Johnson won a third place in 1947, the only time he was able to place in his previous tries. He came through strongly yesterday, picking 113 pounds of clean cotton in 1 1/2 hours.

Johnson is a cotton picker by trade and the father of five children.

Mrs. Eugene Shinnott of Memphis won the first prize in the women's division and collected $550.

Britain's Malayan Chief Assassinated by Red Guerrillas

DiMaggio, Himself Ailing, Watches as Yank Trainers Work Over Injured Mantle

By HAL BOYLE

Yankee Stadium, N. Y., Oct. 6 (AP)—The hitless old hero and the hurt young hero had adjoining lockers in the Yankee dressing room.

It was after the second game of the World Series—the tenth World Series for the elderly man of almost 37 and the first World Series for the young man of 19.

The boy was Mickey Mantle and he'd swung his right knee running for a fly ball that the spry old man next to him—Joe DiMaggio—had caught in a game the Yankees won from the New York Giants, 3-0.

Mickey was chunky and blonde and brave and worried, and he had the fresh look any father would like his son to wear. There was a crowd around him, and there was nobody around Joe.

"No, it doesn't hurt," said Mickey, looking down at his heavily bandaged leg. "I didn't trip or slip on anything. My leg just went out and I went down. I don't know yet whether I'm through so far as the rest of the series goes or not."

He looked unhappy as he dressed slowly.

The old man next to Mickey didn't shower at once. He rested. He sat there in his white under shirt with the black sleeves—an undershirt that had "DiMaggio" scrawled in ink on its torn back. His pants were open, his shoes were off, and his feet breathed through his socks.

An attendant brought him a beer, and he drank it deeply. Then he had another, and took it slowly, the sweat of the afternoon sun still beading his face. Somebody asked him what he thought when Mantle had spruined on the turf suddenly in the fifth inning as Joe himself went on to make the catch.

"I didn't know what had happened at first," he said, and then glanced in sympathy toward Mickey and added:

"What can you say when some body is hurt?"

DiMaggio, a baseball immortal caught in the mortality of all men who compete beyond their prime, made no mention of his own troubles. He is the first man since Babe Ruth to play in ten World Series.

In nine previous series he scored 24 times, knocked 77 homers, and batted in 18 other runs.

In the first two games of this series the Yankee clipper has played his usual flawless game in the outfield. But his bat has lost its magic. In seven times at the plate he has failed even to reach first base. He knocked four long flies, two feeble grounders and fanned once.

Someone asked him what he blamed his hard luck on in the current series.

"I haven't had any hard luck," said Joe. "I just haven't been hitting. Today they were pitching me out balls. Every time I swung I was out."

When someone remarked politely that a lot of people were still looking for him to pole a ball or two into the bleachers, he said noncommittally:

"Yeah-h-h. Well, maybe things he get a little better."

DiMaggio is a workman, a professional, a champion. He plays each ball game each day. If he has reached the end of one of the brightest trails ever blazed in baseball, he will do so without excuses or apology for the fact he no longer can do well what he used to do superbly.

"Today or tomorrow Joe may be a series hero again, as he has so many times before. But he'll never be more of a champion than he was yesterday, sitting alone in the Yankee dressing room watching without envy as younger players got the recognition he has enjoyed for 15 peerless years.

MUSIC COULD CURE ILLS
Edmonton, Alberta, Oct. 6 (AP)—Edward Johnson, former general manager of the Metropolitan Opera company, thinks music could cure the world's ills.

Stalin Says He's Exploded an 'A' Bomb

Moscow, Oct. 6 (AP)—Generalissimo Joseph Stalin disclosed today Russia recently exploded an atomic bomb in a test and plans more test blasts of "atomic bombs of various calibers."

This was the first time the Soviet union had announced it had exploded an atomic bomb.

Stalin made his revelation in a front page interview with an unnamed correspondent of Pravda, official newspaper of the Russian Communist party.

The announcement was telephoned to U. S. Ambassador Alan Kirk just before he left for the airport to board a plane for the United States. The news did not delay his departure.

Stalin advised American leaders not to "get excited and raise the alarm about the atomic bomb explosion in the U. S. S. R."

The Russian leader said Soviet bombs are no threat to American security because the "Soviet union is not contemplating an attack on the United States or any other country whatsoever at any time."

Instead, he said, Russian bomb developments are for her own defense against aggression.

"The testing of atomic bombs of various calibers will be carried out in future also according to the plan for our country's defense against the Anglo-American aggressive might," he said.

(In Vista, Calif., Gordon Dean, chairman of the U. S. atomic energy commission, said "Stalin was only confirming what we (the United States) already knew."

"But we will watch with great interest any future tests Russia might make," he said.

(The test bomb was not necessarily dropped from an airplane, but might have been exploded on the ground, he added.

President Truman made a statement Wednesday saying the Russians had achieved their second atomic bomb explosion. He had announced two years ago that the United States had knowledge of a previous Russian atomic explosion, but this earlier statement was never confirmed by a Soviet announcement.

Stalin repeated that Russia wants international control of atomic weapons but charged that an American plan put before the United Nations was a "mockery of control."

"What do you think about international control in respect of atomic weapons?" his anonymous Pravda interviewer asked.

"The Soviet union stands for the prohibition of atomic weapons and for stopping production of the atomic weapon," Stalin replied.

The Soviet union stands for strict international control in order that a decision on prohibition of the atomic weapon and on cessation of production of atomic weapons and on the use of already manufactured atomic bombs exclusively for peaceful purposes should be carried out conscientiously and with all exactitude."

Sir H. Gurney of Singapore Dies in Jungle

Singapore, Malaya, Oct. 6 (UP)—British High Commissioner Sir Henry Gurney was ambushed and assassinated on a remote jungle road today, presumably by Communist guerrillas.

Radio Malaya announced that Gurney was killed at 1 p. m. (12:30 a. m. EST) on the Kuala Lumpur-Raub road two miles from a mountain gap below Fraser's hill, a popular central Malayan resort town on the Pahang-Selangor border.

Lady Gurney was with her husband, but escaped death.

The assassins were identified only as "bandits," the term usually applied by the Malayan government to Communist guerrillas who have terrorized the country since 1948.

Sketchy reports said Gurney was in an automobile preceded by a military vehicle which broke down near the ambush scene. Gurney decided to drive on without waiting for a military escort.

The ambush occurred soon afterward. Lady Gurney was in a second car, which stopped at the sound of the gunfire.

Malcolm MacDonald, commissioner general for southeast Asia, was recalled from a tour of North Borneo. He will arrive in Singapore tomorrow.

Gurney, a 53-year-old colonial office career man, was the No. 1 enemy of the guerrillas because of his position as head of the British administration in Malaya.

He took over the job shortly after a state of emergency was declared in June 1948. At the time he attributed the widespread terrorism to "international communism trying to enslave the country and bring it inside the Iron Curtain."

Britain has mobilized 100,000 police and some 25,000 British Gurkha and Malay troops to battle the guerrillas. The Reds strike mostly at remote rubber plantations, killing the planters and destroying the rubber stocks and plantation machinery.

The guerrillas also sabotage rail lines and even have fired rubber warehouses in Singapore.

The Gurneys were ambushed two miles from the gap near Kuala Kubu Bharu, 81 miles by road northeast to Kuala Lumpur and just below Fraser's hill.

The high commissioner and his wife presumably were on route to Fraser's hill, a resort settlement among the 7,000-foot jungle-clad peaks of central Malaya.

Although Red guerrillas have been operating in the area since 1948, British officials continued to visit the resort for weekend holidays.

Gurney joined the colonial office in 1920. He became assistant colonial secretary in the mulen in 1935, chief secretary to the conference of East African governors in 1938 to 1944; colonial secretary to the Gold Coast from 1944 to 1949, and chief secretary to the Palestine government from 1949 to 1949.

"The all-important issue facing the American people today," Gov. Stevenson said, "is foreign policy."

He added that Sen. Robert Taft (R-Ohio), a prospective candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, twice the party's standard bearer, are "poles apart."

DOROTHY DIX

Boy Backs Out

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am 16 years old, and for the past ten months have been going with Andy, who is 18. Of course I knew we were too young to think of marriage, but we did declare our love for each other. Then the other day he said he didn't love me any more. I'm just crazy about him and his change of heart didn't alter my feelings at all. He still telephones me and says he's just mixed up in his own mind. Do you think I could ever win him back? He isn't going with anyone else yet, but I'm heartbroken anyway.

Answer: In all probability, your boy friend's change of heart had nothing more than panic at the thought of getting into matrimonial plans too soon. Though you did not mention it in your letter, you probably did discuss marriage, as young as you are, and perhaps you were a little insistent on the subject. If you were, it's just your femininity showing through. Anyway, it was enough to scare Andy. Bide your time and he'll turn up again, all yours!

Your Heart Will Mend
Don't get yourself too distressed about it. If he does decide his feelings for you weren't love, you may feel your heart is broken for a while, but hearts mend almost sooner than anything else, especially with the very young. If all the teen age hearts that are broken remain in their shattered state, weddings would taper off to a new low level. That old bugbear, a statistics, says that only 14 per cent of all married people knew each other before 18. Of course most of them were in love—with someone else—before that age, so you see with the power of numbers against you, you are more than likely to be in love perhaps twice more before meeting the "one and only." A first love has this advantage over all future heart throbs. It never dies, it never grows old, it never loses its glamour! Right through middle age and beyond, it can be taken periodically out of the past and shed a few new moonbeams over a monotonous present.

If you do lose Andy, keep your head high, your courage up and set out for the next conquest.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a girl of 17 with a serious problem. A few months ago some friends of my parents asked me to write to a boy 20, in Korea. We corresponded for a while, and then I met a very nice boy here. We have been going steady and hope to be married in a year or so. Now this soldier is coming home. What shall I do? I don't want to go with him but I feel sorry for him and don't want to hurt my parents' friends. What shall I do?

Answer: Honesty is the best policy. If you can catch your soldier before he arrives home, write him the truth. Since you have never met he won't be too disappointed. Why not introduce him to some of your girl friends when he gets home or have them take over the writing job for you? Servicemen always enjoy letters, and he'll undoubtedly be glad to make new friends this way. He'll thank you for enabling him to meet new people, and your parents' friends certainly should have enough understanding to realize the situation and not be hurt at your failure to go out with the soldier.

Dear Miss Dix: I have met a man with whom I am very much in love. He loves me, too, and we have everything in common. One thing upsets me, though. His parents are first cousins and I am afraid this may have an effect on our children.

Answer: For a complete and authoritative opinion in this case, I suggest you consult your family doctor. He can give you all the angles, which I am sure will give you the confidence to proceed with your marriage convinced of your children's good heritage.
